FACT SHEET

WHO WE ARE

The Air Force Wounded Warrior Program is a Congressionally mandated and federally funded Department of the Air Force program providing comprehensive non-medical support and advocacy for seriously wounded, ill, and injured Total Force servicemembers.

WHAT WE DO

The goal of the Air Force Wounded Warrior Program is to ensure a fit and lethal force by supporting recovering servicemembers' transition back to duty while ensuring their needs are met. When that's not feasible, the Program provides personalized non-medical care management during the separation or retirement process with a warm hand-off to the VA for continued care and access to resources.

RECOVERY

- Connect Airmen and Guardians with programs and resources.
- Ensure Airmen and Guardians receive the entitlements and benefits available based on their individual circumstances.

REHABILITATION

- Maintain personalized care and assistance after their transition back to work or to veteran status.
- Provide professional services such as transition assistance, employment assistance, moving assistance, financial counseling, information and referral, and emergency financial assistance.

REINTEGRATION

- Assist with applying for retention using the Limited Assignment Status Program.
- Assist in improving their career goals and connecting them to career resources and opportunities.

"We must follow through on our commitment to the success of the team. This includes demanding and protecting an environment in which all Airmen can reach their full potential. It means uplifting our wingmen, while holding ourselves accountable for our actions. It means removing barriers while maintaining and enforcing standards. It means all-axis leadership-top-down, peer-to-peer, and even "leading up."

- Gen David W. Allvin, Air Force Chief of Staff
